Secretary Reagan continues on NLGA Executive Committee

PHOENIX, AZ – Secretary of State Michele Reagan was again elected to serve on the National Lieutenant Governors Association’s Executive Committee during the annual Summer Meeting in Nashville. The committee meets three times a year to chart the course of policy issues to be pursued by the nation’s second-highest state and territorial officeholders.

“It’s a tremendous honor to continue to serve with such an amazing group of people in a leadership role,” said Secretary Reagan. “Not only is this a great opportunity to share Arizona’s best practices with other elected officials around the country, it also helps us identify opportunities for further economic growth and improved quality of life.”

“Secretary Reagan was reelected to this position by a bi-partisan group of her peers,” said NLGA Director Julia Hurst. “Her unanimous election among officials of both parties from every region of the country speaks to the high regard she is held in among her peers.”

“I was extremely pleased to host the nation’s Lt. Governor’s in Arizona last year,” continued the Secretary. “We were proud to showcase what a spectacular place we live and have each of these influential leave with a different perspective of our state then when they arrived.”

The NLGA provides research and best practices exchange to the officeholders first in line of succession to governor in all 50 states and the U.S. territories.

The National Lieutenant Governors Association (NLGA), organized in 1962, is the professional association for the elected officials first in line of succession to the governors in the 50 states and five U.S. territories. The mission of NLGA is, in part, to foster interstate cooperation and to promote the efficiency and effectiveness of the office.
